Theme: A Community Gathering Places

Carpet Bombing, Iraqi Markets

Since the war in Iraq 2001 and the ousting of the Iraqi government in 2002-2003, we have witnessed the vast amount of insurgents who have used terror as their main weapon. By attacking and bombing gathering places and large crowds, terrorists can inflict a psychological paranoia to its citizens.

A market which is a place where we feel a strong sense of community, when attacked can become a place of distress and imprint a negative atmosphere.

The proposal is to cover the bombed perimeter with a Persian Carpet in a form of mosaic or printed tile suitable for a pedestrian surface.

Persian Carpet is a surface for gathering, eating, communicating, praying and family interaction. By using this surface as a metaphor, the proposal hopes to encourage a sense of gathering and activity back in the community which could be a catalyst for new social and economic growth whilst respecting the memory of the inflicted site.
